WOMEN AS PRINTERS.

Miss Belya M. Herron, instructor in economics in the University of Illinois, is the author of a monograph on "Labor Organizations Among Women," which has recently appeared. In this monograph Miss Herron discusses in an interesting way, the work of women in the printing establishments of the country.

She says that the work of women in the newspaper offices is small in proportion to that of men. There are a few women employed on newspapers in the large cities as machine operators or proofreaders; in the smaller towns they set up straight matter, but are never employed as a makeup or in the ad. room. In 1900 there were in newspaper and periodical offices 73,653 men, earning nearly $45,000,000, and 14,851 women, earning $4,600,000, a ratio of something less than five to one in favor of the men.

During the decade 1890-1900 there was a much greater increase among the women than among men, suggesting that competition had led to a search for cheaper labor. Of the 9,045 workers upon the linotype machine only 520 were women. A large proportion of these machines are in newspaper offices and a partial explanation of the small number of female operators in this class of work is found in the necessity for night work on all morning papers.

The efficiency of women as printers and their corresponding wage is generally less than that of the men. One explanation of this is that they cannot stand the strain of the rapid work which the newspaper offices in particular demand. Another explanation for the inferior role played by women in the trade is to be found in their lack of preparation for it. It is the unwritten law that women enter the trade and receive regular pay after six weeks' tuition in typesetting, while men serve an apprenticeship of four years. Thus the high grade work is impossible for women, who are employed mainly in setting up straight matter and distributing. In proofreading, however, no distinction is made between men and women. Feeding the press is also largely done by women, but pressmen have no competition from their sisters in the trade.—Reading (Pa.) Telegram.

Sexton Mistook the Day.

The inhabitants of Middlesex were alarmed this morning by the ringing of the church bell. Leaving their work they seized pails and started, thinking that an alarm of fire was being rung. Investigation proved that the sexton had mistaken the day and supposed he was ringing the bell for the Sunday morning service.—St. Albans Messenger.

Coal as Diet.

Apropos of a statement that "coal would appear a strange article of diet," a correspondent writes to the Westminster Gazette saying that it is not only children and cats who regard it as a luxury, as he has an Irish water spaniel which makes away with a number of lumps a day unless the coal is kept out of his reach.

Costly Coat of Furs.

A coat of skins of reindeer fawns only a few days old is said to be worth thousands of dollars. The skins match perfectly in color and they are doubled so that the coat is the same inside as outside. This coat is as light as an ordinary raincoat, but warmer than heavy fur, and it is also waterproof.

Too Docile to Please.

There is a New York man advertising for a wife who says he is willing to put on and take off the shoes of the woman who will have him, and be a docile and sunny spouse generally. Small wonder that such a man has to advertise in distant papers for some one to love him.

Rings Once Unknown to Greeks.

The Greeks, Pliny thinks, knew nothing of the ring in the time of the Trojan war. The reason he gives is that we find no mention of it in Homer, but that when letters, etc., were to be sent away, they were tied up, and the strings knotted.

Home of George Stephenson.

George Stephenson lived at Tafton House, Chesterfield, England. The parish church has a unique twisted spire. Among the interesting places in the neighborhood is "Revolution House," so called from the plots laid there in 1688.

Builds Locomotive in Short Time.

The Hunslet Engine Company, a Leeds firm, has achieved a record by building a locomotive in twenty-one days. The order made necessary the preparation of forty-five drawings and the engine weighed 29½ tons.

Primitive Medical Examination.

In the dark days directors tested the physical fitness of applicants for insurance by making them hop round the board-room for ten minutes, or, if the client happened to be fat, he had to jump over the table.

Peculiar Case of Poisoning.

An Austrian army officer cut himself under the chin in shaving, the green collar of his tunic rubbed against the cut and he died of blood poisoning.
